

This dissertation is the result of my own work and includes nothing which is the outcome of work done in collaboration.

I would, however, like to thank some of the many people around the world who have gone out of their way to provide support and encouragement. At the Department of Anglo-Saxon, Norse, & Celtic in Cambridge, my faculty supervisor Paul Bibire; also Andy Orchard and Martin Syrett. Thanks to Anneli Sundkvist, Svante Norr, and Stefan Brink at Uppsala's Institution för arkeologi och antik historia, where I was warmly welcomed. Likewise, at the Institut for Folkloristik in København, thanks to Michael Chesnutt and especially Lars Hemmingsen for generous support. Thanks also to Catherine Hills, Morten Axboe, Märit Gaimster, Alison Finlay, Paul Acker, Barbara Crawford, Simon Taylor, Joe Harris, and Steve Mitchell. Lastly, I am deeply grateful to my family for their unflagging support.
